The talk is about traditional water management systems including tanks in Bengaluru and what lessons we can learn from these conventional systems.

Vishwanath Srikantaiah is a water conservation expert, renowned for his tireless and pioneering efforts to find solutions to the country's freshwater crisis. Popularly known as Zenrainman on social media channels, his insightful articles on water and environmental issues frequently appear in mainstream news publications.

A Civil Engineer and Urban Planner by qualification, Vishwanath worked with the Housing and Urban Development Corporation (HUDCO) for 14 years before dedicating himself full-time to solving water issues facing urban and rural communities.
