About the Speaker

Architect Ratish Nanda is Project Director of the Aga Khan Development Network-led conservation and urban renewal project in a heritage precinct in Delhi comprising Humayun's Tomb, Nizamuddin Basti and Sunder Nursery. Using conservation as a tool for development, this project is path-breaking in many ways: it is the first privately funded restoration of a World Heritage Site in India; it integrates heritage conservation with environmental conservation and socio-economic development, involving local and community stakeholders; and it has a strong component of cultural revival.
